Trap to KNQR the World

A few months back, we trolled Hayze Engolah when Twitter trolls found a KNQR social media account apparently based in Australia.

Months later, we're here, paying respect to the man – for getting a 30 Under 30 Forbes list.

When it comes to lists & business, Forbes is as big as they get. And this news is as big as it gets as this week revealed Hayze Engolah became the only Malawian artist to feature on the prestigious list that recognizes 30 Africans changing the game in whatever they're doing.

Gap between ding dong & needy

The social gap between urban & rural Primary School learners was exposed yet again during a National Spelling Bee that took place in Blantyre.

The competition is looking for 20 English-fluent speaking learners from each of the 3 regions in Malawi. This week they took the competition to BT where urban & rural students competed – and boy oh boy.

Most of the learners from what we call “high school” had confidence with the language – and spelled bombastic words (even that word!).

However, most of the learners from urban schools struggled with the Queen’s language – and understandably so; factoring the level of provision of education in rural areas.

Fam giving us district trophy, regardless

Football Association of Malawi (Fam) has maintained that the K60 million districts league trophy will roll out in the course of the year.

The competition was unveiled with pomp at Chiwembe Technical Centre in Blantyre in March last year.

Fam Covid Taskforce Chairperson Chimango Munthali said his committee was assessing progress of the TNM Super League, regional leagues and now the Under-17 and Under-20 national leagues before deciding on how to proceed with the district leagues.
