A few weeks back, Twitter was greeted with the drama when, in a later-deleted tweet, rapper Toast said, “S/O to Gwamba for what he has put in the culture... as for yesterday’s interview [on Made on Monday], no there’s no hate from me & no am not your lil bro & no I haven’t been to your house for advice. The rest is ok just don’t ‘LIE’,” – in reference to Gwamba’s Made on Monday interview with Joy Nathu. Sources close to Toast sent us a screenshot of the rapper’s status, saying “Your GOAT flipped my verse in a song fukwa namudyesa mwala malo mwa udzu.” Gwamba was featured by Emtee on Uzoyimela – rumours say Toast had a verse on the song too, which was allegedly cut off. Rumours.

Mzuni students risk withdrawal

BY FYI Contributor

Mzuni nursing students face expulsion from the institution as the majority are failing to settle tuition fees. He said the University normally enrolls 100 students every year but the majority fail to pay tuition fees for their studies.

Mzuni Vice-Chancellor John Kalenga Saka confirmed the development, saying students that are upgrading their studies are among those affected as they have not secured scholarships. One of the students, Loveness Kuombola, said some of the students were on the verge of withdrawing from the institution because they could not manage to pay K850,000 per year.

MAN OF A FEW WORDS

.....with DUNCAN PHIRI

Open letter to the Flames

Greetings encoded: From the determined playmaker searching for his first NBA title after a 16 year wait..the unpredictable Euro 2020 to the country with a slogan 'its coming home'. All protocols observed.

When Short Messaging Service (SMS), email and social networking replaced the traditional postal letter system, many of us rejoiced. The thought of assembling envelopes, stamps, pieces of paper and that lengthy walk to the hopefully nearest post office would be something our minds would no longer entertain. There is, however, one thing the new forms of messaging have not been able to match or supersede the traditional letter system. That is sincerity of the message. Consequently, we of a few words decided to write a letter to the Malawi National Football Team , The Flames. It reads:

Ma Flames,

You may not know me but I know you. Ever since my parents let me visit the stadiums or turn on the Television, I have been your fan. I have watched you overwhelm the so called continental giants and I have also watched you fall to continental minnows. I have seen you score those pivotal and thrilling last minute winning goals, but I have also seen you concede costly goals in the very same dying minutes. Above all, you have made me proud.

This month, you are at that familiar territory, once again trying your luck at southern Africa's biggest football showpiece, the COSAFA Cup. There a few things I would like you to keep in mind.

Firstly, I would want you to approach this tournament with your heads up high. For a long time you have been deemed 'average' as far as football in the region is concerned.

Indeed no songs have been sung about your ability to cause 'havoc' on the field of play, but no more. This year, only you, the warriors of Zimbabwe and Comoros have earned a ticket to represent the region at Africa's grandest showpiece, the African Cup of Nations. As such, as you are making your way onto the field be it in Rustenburg or Nelspruit, feel it in your hearts that you are giants. The crowds speak highly of you, and so do your opponents.

I would also like you to recall of that Flames squad that reached back to back finals of the '02 and 03' editions under Kim Splidsboel and Allan Gillet respectively. We of a few words believe you can emulate and even surpass what they achieved. For every Joseph Gatros, there is a Frank Banda who can command the midfield, for every overlapping Maupo Msowoya, there is a Precious Sambani with great runs down the flanks, for every Peter mgangira teasing cross, there is a Stanley Sanudi with crosses quite similar to Liverpool's Trent Alexander-Arnold. They were tough, resilient and determined, but so are you. Having reached this far, let me wish you all the best at the tourney, Make us proud!!

Kind Regards,

People of a few words
